Paul Pressman was born in 1932, in Paris, France. During the war, he went to the South of France with his mother, who was working with the French resistance, and then he was sent to Switzerland, where he lived with a Protestant minister (with whom he was very close, and remained in touch with for many years after the war). After the war ended, he was reunited with his mother and brother. His father and another brother were killed during the war.

Paul lived in France until 1983, when he moved to Lexington. He is a practicing chiropractor and acupuncturist.
