

02_0014 Summary

Chaim Engel and Selma Engel discuss how they met while being forced to dance at Sobibór, Poland; their arrivals at the camp; how they were separated from their families; the layout of the camp; how they communicated within Sobibór; escaping from the camp during the planned uprising; their life in hiding; the birth of their first son; meeting Anne Frank's father, Odo Frank; trying to get back to Selma's hometown in Holland; how they survived after the war, their life in Holland; their move to Israel; the growth of their family; their immigration to America; their lives in Connecticut; how shared their stories with schoolchildren, both in Germany and the United States; their trips back to Germany to testify in SS Guards' trials; how they feel about religion and Judaism; their belief that Holland was very anti-Semitic despite what is presented in the story of Anne Frank.