

INGE AUERBACHER
Interview, 11 April 1992

Inge Auerbacher discusses her prewar life in Kippenheim, Germany, where her orthodox Jewish family lived peacefully with Christians; her memories of Kristallnacht; the transports of Jews beginning in 1941, the 1942 deportation of her entire family to Theresienstadt; the “clean-up” of Theresienstadt done for the benefit of the Red Cross Commission and for a propaganda film; her liberation on May 8, 1945, arriving in the United States 1946 aboard the Marie Perch; her work as a chemist with renowned scientist, Meyer Friedman, and her life’s work lecturing about the Holocaust and being a voice against bigotry.