

Summary of Interview with Frances Zatz
April 9, 1992
North Woodmere, New York

233_0144

Frances Zatz describes her early childhood in pre World War II Poland; the siege of Warsaw by German troops; the outbreak of the war; the building of the Warsaw ghetto and subsequent hardships there; her mother smuggling ammunitions into the ghetto; plans for the Jewish uprising; being smuggled out of the ghetto and living with a Christian family; her reunion with her mother and sister after the Warsaw uprising; working in the factories making uniforms for German soldiers; her time in a German detention camp; being liberated by the Russians; moving to Berlin, post-war, and eventually immigrating to America.