

Judith Meisel discusses her experience as a prisoner in Stutthof; life after escaping Stutthof; living in a convent; working for a family as a refugee; nearly drowning in the North Sea after her ship was torpedoed; living in the woods in Denmark; being liberated by the Red Cross; contracting Tuberculosis and staying in a Siloril sanitarium in Copenhagen; finding her brother; meeting her ex-husband and moving to Canada; getting married; Judaism; how the Holocaust shaped her life; Zionism and Israel; starting a family; the Civil Rights movement in the United States; meeting Martin Luther King; how she began sharing the memories of her experiences during the Holocaust; going back to the Kovno ghetto; creating the Beyond Tolerance Center; working on the Anne Frank exhibit in Santa Barbara; her daughter's Holocaust art; founding the Northwest Interfaith Movement; going to Israel; being a single mother; meeting her second husband; the feminist movement; her film of her trip back to Lithuania; and her philanthropic achievements.